

To Whom It May Concern,

I am a representative of Rabbit Air. We an air purifiers manufacturer that have all of our air purifiers certified as part of the Energy Star program. We would like to make a comment regarding the verification testing.

Several years ago, Energy Star started requiring selective verification testings of the products. Perhaps because the pool for air purifiers is relatively small, one of our products are selected almost every single year.

We feel that this creates unnecessary burden for companies like ours that have consistently passed the verification tests. We would like to suggest having companies exempted from testing for 3 years unless their product fails the verification test. If the company is honest and products continue meet the require standard, there is little point to keep testing the different models from the same company every year.
