State Spotlights

Howe Corporation, a U.S. commercial icemaking equipment manufacturer, achieved continued improvements in its energy efficient product design, using low global warming potential refrigerants in its products, including 55 percent of models that are ENERGY STAR certified. Howe Corporation also showed exceptional engagement with customers through multiple promotional efforts, and implemented new metrics for its buildings to improve sustainability and energy efficiency.

Ventas, Inc., a healthcare real estate investment trust, invested more than $14M on energy efficiency projects and aligned its energy program with ENERGY STAR guidelines, including certification of 35 senior care communities and two independent living communities as ENERGY STAR.

Beko US, Inc., a manufacturer of major home appliances, set and met a goal for new products to meet or exceed ENERGY STAR criteria, thereby increasing the number of ENERGY STAR certified offerings, expanding the categories that earn ENERGY STAR Most Efficient recognition, and receiving the ENERGY STAR Emerging Technology Award for a number of refrigeration products.

ComEd, an electric utility, maintained a diverse portfolio of ENERGY STAR programs for all customers while striving to support development of affordable housing, and ensured efficient products reached low- and moderate-income households and small businesses and organizations in underserved communities.
